When Ignorance Is Bliss
"Is your house insured against fire?"
"I don't know. I've just been reading the insurance policy."—Cornell Widow.

No Doubt of It
"What is a portable house, pa?"
"Any house carried away by a cyclone."

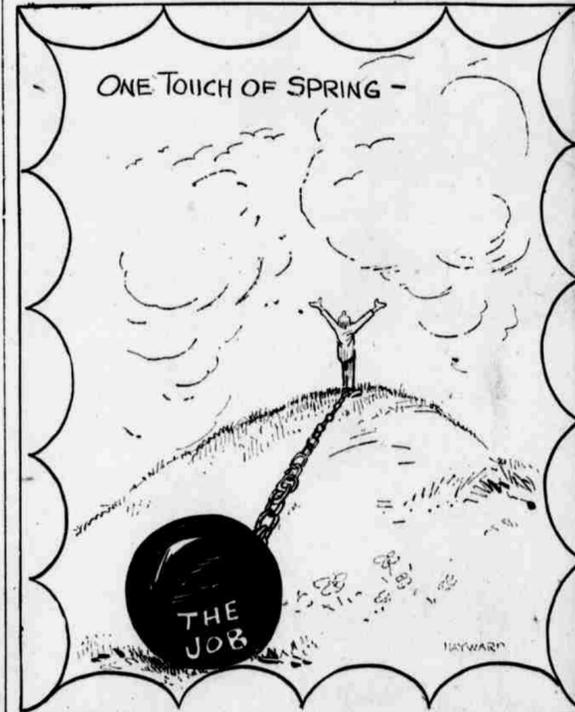

The Young Lady Across the Way

The young lady across the way says she saw in the paper that the Senate had revised its debating rules, so she supposes the minority will be allowed a chance to be heard now.

Much Needed
Crawford—I don't suppose this leak investigation will amount to anything.
Crabshaw—It's not likely. But just for a change they might have a leak down in Wall street that would let some of the water out of the stocks.

THE PADDED CELL

Not for Him
Professor Drinkwater—Don't you know that coffee is better than whisky for a man exposed as you are?
Night Watchman—Nonsense! If I drank a cup of coffee I wouldn't be able to sleep all night.

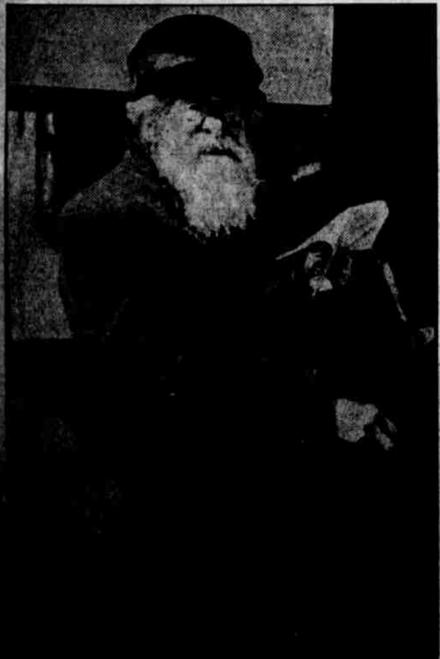

Colossal Ignorance
Fair Fair-Visitor—Can you tell me why the State exhibits are all closed on Sundays?
Gruff Guide—Well, I should say so! Don't you know that the States belong to the Union?—Chaparral.
